Code of Conduct & Guidelines

The Forum for Ethiopian Scholars and Professionals (FESP) tries to adhere to the standards of professional conduct. These guidelines are intended for all participants to establish minimum standards and expectations to ensure a productive and successful conference and colloquia.

FESP is a 501 C3 nonprofit incorporated in Washington D.C. EIN 86-2469248

EMAIL: forumforethiopianscholars.profe@gmail.com Web <https://forumforethiopianscholars.net/>

The conference will be transmitted live. Hence the standards and etiquettes required for formal online meetings will be applied.

Session Chairs

Session chairs and presenters should connect to the conference using a Private ZOOM link that will be sent by FESP. Please expect an email and link from Dr. Kone Fiseha. Please do not share the link with another person. All speakers must test their audio and video and ensure that they can share their Power Point and other material that they want to use for their presentation. Please ensure that your video is of television quality (good lighting, uncluttered background & business or traditional attire).

One of the most important responsibilities of session chairs is ensuring that sessions and presentations start and finish on time, without any exception. We request session chairs to pay attention to the following:

- (1) Please ensure that your connection is working. Allow enough time for the technicians to get you connected. Try to be available early, at least thirty minutes before the start of the conference to check your settings.
- (2) Introduce all speakers at the beginning of the session. Please no long vita. It should not take more than one minute to introduce a speaker.
- (3) Do not try to answer questions that may be directed to the speakers. The chat line for this colloquium is closed. Ignore all malicious comments and unidentified communications.
- (4) Promote collegiality and respectfulness during Q & A, and always.
- (5) Please put your cellphone in silent mode and read text messages and reminders that may come from the conference committee.
- (6) Alert presenters five minutes and one minute before the end of their time, and you should stop the speaker on time.
- (7) Do not paraphrase what a speaker or the speakers have said and refrain from giving your opinion or talking about your research/experience or your organization. You might want to give additional references to the audience for research.
- (8) Please note the difference between a "Session Chair" and a "Moderator". A session chair is "responsible for clearly communicating expectations and logistical information about the session" while a moderator is "responsible for guiding the direction and flow of discussion". You are a session chair and not a moderator.

Speakers

All speakers are reminded that the purpose of their presentation is to contribute to policy formulation and implementation. Your presentation must end with two/three doable concrete policy proposals. The policy must have been tried and tested and benefit all Ethiopians. The conference is not a platform for promoting a speaker's organization or business or unfounded opinion. As such, all presenters are expected to be non-partisan, and should have no conflict of interest whatsoever. It is not a forum for advocacy, however worthy your cause might be. It is not a forum for rationalizing conflict and separatism.

Speakers are requested to make note of the following:

EMAIL:forumforethiopianscholars.profe@gmail.com Web <https://forumforethiopianscholars.net/>

- (1) Please ensure that your presentation is of high quality, focused and understandable by non-experts in the field, the public, “Generation Z”, policymakers, and all political actors.
- (2) To reach a larger audience please note that the language used in the conference is Amharic. Presenters who are unable to speak the Amharic language may present their work in English. Your power point can be in either Amharic or English.
- (3) Please note that the forum is not created for canvassing support. Stick to the paper/abstract that has been reviewed.
- (4) To the extent possible, avoid complex mathematical/statistical modelling, technical jargons, abstraction, crude generalizations, and aggressive, inflammatory, offensive or divisive language.
- (5) Address individuals, political organizations, institutions, governments and social groups using their formal names, ranks, titles, etc. and the way they would like to be called.
- (6) Keep your presentation to 25 minutes and allow time for questions and answers. Please try to get your key messages across as early as possible. If your presentation is longer than the allotted time, you will run the risk of being cut off, without communicating the main points of your paper.
- (7) Limit your answers to the question(s) directed to you and answer them in two minutes or less.
- (8) Please note that the event will be transmitted live and recorded. It will be available for public viewing for an indefinite period. While the intellectual property rests on the speaker/presenter the copyright to the material belongs to FESP.
- (9) Important Disclaimer: Neither FESP nor its board members take responsibility, whatsoever, for what a speaker has said or did not say or for any damages that may arise from the presentation or use of the information. It is the speaker’s sole responsibility to avoid any civil or criminal litigation that might arise from the use/misuse of information presented at this forum.
- (10) Please allow time for technological glitches that might occur. Be patient.

Online participants

We encourage online viewers to participate using the Q&A option. There is a separate link for online participants. All questions that get sent will be moderated. It is at the sole discretion of the session chair to decide which questions/comments should be answered. Please comply with the following guidelines:-

- (1) Make sure that your question is relevant to the theme of the session.
- (2) State your full name (no pen name or unidentified cellphone), your institutional affiliation, the country where you are, and identify the speaker to whom the question is addressed to.
- (3) As a matter of courtesy, be brief and ask only one question. No long comments will be entertained. Do not send file attachments.
- (4) If you are given the opportunity to ask your question verbally, you should be on video.
- (5) Address individuals, political organizations, governments, institutions, and social groups using their formal names, ranks, titles, etc. and the way they would like to be called. Use of derogatory and/or downgrading/condescending adjectives/codes/pronouns that is judgmental or insulting attitude is disallowed.

Media owners

For this conference the FESP has not commissioned a specific media outlet to market and record and transmit. Media owners who want to transmit the proceedings of this colloquium, undertake to (i) transmit the proceedings “as is” and indicate that it is the “courtesy of FESP.” No part of this colloquium may be transmitted or re-transmitted for commercial purposes or profiling social/religious groups. Media owners are requested to assist in educating the public about plagiarism and polarization.

Please note that FESP, the authors, editors, publishers, and/or any partner do not accept responsibility, whatsoever, for errors or omissions, or for the consequences of application of information. We draw the attention of media owners and YouTubers to Title 18 of the United States Code on the prohibition of illicit digital transmission and equivalent international laws. Disputes arising from transgression of digital transmission laws will be handled in accordance with the relevant jurisdiction.
